Tess is seven years old. She lives in a big yellow house. It has lots of flowers. Tess has two cats and a turtle. One day, before bed, her mother said, "Tess, please go find the turtle."

Tess looked in front of the house, but she didn't see the turtle. It was hard to find. There were good places to hide. There were so many flowers. There were tall yellow flowers and little red ones. Then she heard a noise under the flowers. She thought it was the turtle. She looked.

"This isn't a turtle," Tess said. "My turtle is green and brown." This was something else. It was little and gray. It had black eyes. Its black nose sniffed the ground.

It was a hedgehog. Tess stood very still. She was very quiet. The hungry hedgehog walked up to Tess. It sniffed her shoe. It bit the toe of her shoe.

"Hey!" Tess said. "That's my good shoe!"

The hedgehog ran away and hid in the flowers. Tess looked for it. She found her turtle instead. "Let's go inside and tell Mom about the hedgehog," she said.
