

Basic Parts of a Plant  A diagram of a plant with a central vertical stem. A flower is on the left side, and a bud is on the right side. Leaves are attached to the stem. The root system is shown below the ground line. Labels with arrows point to: flower, stem, leaf, bud, and root.	flower  A diagram of a plant with a central vertical stem. A flower is on the left side, and a bud is on the right side. Leaves are attached to the stem. The root system is shown below the ground line. A label with an arrow points to the flower.
bud  A diagram of a plant with a central vertical stem. A flower is on the left side, and a bud is on the right side. Leaves are attached to the stem. The root system is shown below the ground line. A label with an arrow points to the bud.	leaf  A diagram of a plant with a central vertical stem. A flower is on the left side, and a bud is on the right side. Leaves are attached to the stem. The root system is shown below the ground line. A label with an arrow points to one of the leaves.
stem  A diagram of a plant with a central vertical stem. A flower is on the left side, and a bud is on the right side. Leaves are attached to the stem. The root system is shown below the ground line. A label with an arrow points to the stem.	root  A diagram of a plant with a central vertical stem. A flower is on the left side, and a bud is on the right side. Leaves are attached to the stem. The root system is shown below the ground line. A label with an arrow points to the root system.