You are going to study a bit about the way newspaper articles are written. First, find out what you already know about the news. Read each of the following statements, and decide whether or not you agree with it. In the space provided, write 'T' for true, or 'F' for false.

1. News articles are only written about disasters, wars, and other catastrophic events.
2. Newspapers print articles that are of interest to readers.
3. News articles can use quotes and opinions from witnesses and observers.
4. News articles are error-proof.
5. If the information is not in the ‘lead’, or introductory, paragraph, it is not important.
6. The purpose of news articles is to inform, not to entertain.
7. News articles are not enjoyable to read.
8. The lead of a news article answers the 5w-1h questions. (who, what, when, where, why, and how)
9. The style of a news article is narrative, like a story.
10. News articles contain dialogue.
11. News articles often contain imaginative details or elements of fantasy.
12. A caption is a short piece of text which contains a summary of a news article.
13. All news articles are accompanied by pictures.
14. ‘Headings’ or ‘headlines’, are long, detailed, complete sentences.
15. Locations that are well known do not have to include states.
16. If news articles have mistakes, corrections have to be published.
17. A news article can sometimes be made up of only a lead paragraph, and still adequately cover the information.
18. News articles use a lot of descriptive language
19. News articles basically follow the same structure as an essay because they are both informative.
20. The skills and techniques used to write news articles, which are non-fiction, and stories, which are fiction, are completely different.
Main Elements of a News Article

There are certain elements that are common to almost all articles that you will read in the newspaper or find on the Internet. The following list explains the five major components, or parts, of a news article.

- Headline (Heading)
The headline is the title of the news article. The headline should be short, does not include a lot of detail, and should catch the readers’ attentions. It is normally not a complete sentence, and tries to summarize the main idea or subject of the article. It is often printed in larger letters than the rest of the article, and the major words are capitalized.

- Byline
This line tells who is writing the article. It may also include the address of the author and the publication or news source for which he or she writes.

- Location
This is usually placed at the beginning of the article in bold print. If the city or location is well-known, the name can be written alone, but if the city is less famous, more information is included. For example, the byline of an article written in Atlanta, Georgia would read ‘Atlanta’, while an article from Leary, Georgia would have to include the name of the state.

- Lead Paragraph(s)
The lead paragraph is found at the beginning of the article. The lead briefly answers the questions “who”, “what”, “when”, “why”, “where”, and “how”. The ‘skeleton’ of the story can be found here.

- Supporting Paragraph(s)
These are the paragraphs which follow the lead. They develop the ideas introduced by the lead, and give more information in the form of explanations, details, or quotes. In many newspapers, these paragraphs are found on subsequent pages.
Headline News

Match the headline with the correct lead paragraph.

Several children expressed concern about Santa’s health, and were reassured by mall officials that, “Santa is fine, he’s just taking a break.” The absence of Santa is a serious setback for the mall, which opened only last week.</td>

Mr. Jordan Bates, an English teacher at Kennedy High School, is the star of the newest exhibit at the local art museum. The exhibit is entitled “Teachers on the Weekends,” and features photographs of teachers fishing, having picnics, and doing grocery shopping. Ms. Sandra Graham, the artist who prepared the show, was unavailable for comment.

George Smallton, the editor of the Jonesbury Times, was shocked to see his paper Tuesday morning. Since he had last seen it Monday night, something very strange had happened: the paper had switched languages. Headlines that had read “New School in Town” now read “Neue Schule in der Stadt.” Mr. Smallton has apologized to the community for the confusion, and has promised to work hard to discover the cause of the mix-up.

The residents of the small town of Reading, Anystate, are tired of waiting for the state to fund road repairs. Irritated at being forgotten in the capital, the inhabitants have started a letter writing campaign. Sent to the governor and the state legislators, the letters describe the terrible condition of the Reading roads, and request money to fix them. “If they won’t pay attention to us, we’ll just have to make them!” explained local resident Margaret Hickman.

Putting a Sentence in Its Place

The following page contains an article about a group of middle school students. Unfortunately, the sentences have been mixed up. Read through the list, and on the line next to each statement, indicate the part of the article in which it should appear. (headline, lead, etc.) Once you have identified each sentence, go back through and order the statements to form the original story.

1. Seventh Graders Tell the News
2. Anytown, USA
3. Many other eyewitnesses were impressed by the students’ motivation and enthusiasm.
4. On Monday, one thousand seventh graders argued and debated the issue of how to deliver the news appropriately.
5. Sources indicate that the school children were inspired to organize the debate by their English teacher, Ms. Garcia.
6. Although the class was a lot of work, the students are proud of what they accomplished, and are glad they had the opportunity to learn a little about journalism.
7. The debate on proper journalistic writing techniques took place at an undisclosed local middle school.
8. Local bookstore owner Shelley Mann praised this event as a “wake-up call for the whole community.” She confessed, “I certainly hope this epidemic continues!”
9. Police chief Michael Jones added, “That teacher should be encouraged as much as possible. It really benefits the entire community, and not just her students.”
10. Ms. Garcia is currently advising other teachers at the middle school on ways they can introduce newspapers into their classrooms.
12. The certified and highly qualified teacher was not available for comment.
13. It has been suggested that she may be currently overwhelmed by an overabundance of writing assignments to grade before the end of the semester.
14. Ms. Garcia has been teaching English for twenty-four years, but has only recently introduced a unit on journalism into her classes.
15. The students all give the credit for their work to the influence of their teacher, who encouraged them to help spread the news.
16. She created the unit in the hopes of raising student awareness about different styles of writing.
17. The seventh-graders independently designed projects to test the effectiveness of several different styles of reporting.
18. A former student of Ms. Garcia’s was interviewed and stated, “She’s the best and deserves a big prize! She opened my eyes to reporting the facts.”
19. A movie and book deal on the inspirational teacher is allegedly in the making.
20. Studies show that reading the news frequently helps people learn to write informative articles.
The Goals of a News Article

Most journalists (the people who write news articles) try to follow certain guidelines in their work. These principles of journalism help make sure that when people open a newspaper, they can believe what they read.

1. A news article tells the truth: the journalist writes facts that are, to the best of his/her knowledge, true. A careful journalist only states things that he/she can prove to be true, and will ‘cite’ the source of any uncertain information.

   example: “According to Mrs. Brown, principal of North Oaks High School, most high school freshmen take Spanish as a second language.”

   In the statement above, even if it is later discovered that more high school freshmen take French instead of Spanish, the journalist has not lied. He/she has only claimed that Mrs. Brown says more freshmen take Spanish, which is still a true statement.

2. News is factual. Something that is factual can be proved or disproved. For example, “Last Saturday was a rainy day,” is a factual statement, because it can be clearly shown that last Saturday either was or was not rainy. “Rainy days are depressing,” is not a factual statement, because it is a personal opinion.

3. News articles are objective. They do not reflect the personal opinions of the journalist. Quotes and opinions of witnesses and observers to events may be included in an article, but they must be cited.

4. News articles relate information that affects or is of interest to the public. Some newspapers print articles that are of interest to a smaller audience. When the audience is concentrated in a particular region, such as a particular city or state, the newspaper is known as a ‘local’ paper.

5. The purpose of a news article is to report the facts of a current event or problem. Although many people enjoy reading the news, the purpose of a news article is not entertainment.

6. The language used in news articles is often different from the language that is used in everyday conversation, or in stories or narratives. The style of writing is impersonal, and the vocabulary is often more formal.
Fact or Opinion?

Read the following statements, and decide if the statement is expressing a fact or an opinion. Write ‘fact’ or ‘opinion’ on the line provided. Underline the word or words that indicate a statement is an opinion.

1. Commas are the hardest type of punctuation mark to study.
2. Twenty percent of the punctuation marks in an average book will be commas.
3. On Tuesday, the 7th of October, the talented English teacher presented the punctuation rules to the committee.
4. Professor Knowitall presented evidence to support the rules of punctuation in a forum last Tuesday.
5. The English language is studied in many regions of the world.
6. The English language is the most difficult language to study in the world.
7. During a heated debate, several grammarians who had proposed a change in traditional rules of punctuation were unjustly criticized by the old-fashioned grammarians on the board of directors.
8. Developments of new learning strategies are being proposed in a new language book entitled I Need Some Help Please!
9. The book contains some of the worst explanations around.
10. Some critics of the book argue that its contents may be inaccurate.
11. Reports show that less than fifty percent of high-school students read at an advanced level.
12. In a lovely classroom in South Carolina, the young teacher is applying her new skills to teach her language classes about grammar.

The Target Audience

News articles are written to target the interest of its readers. Many newspapers are distributed or sold only in certain geographical areas, and print articles that are interesting to the residents of their particular area. Information regarding the new high school in San Francisco is unlikely to be of interest to a reader in Nashville, Tennessee, so a Nashville newspaper may decide not to print that article. Some newspapers, however, are distributed across a large area, and are read by people who live on opposite sides of the country. Newspapers must decide how large their audience is, and if a news article contains information that will benefit or be of interest to the readers.

The chart below will help you organize news articles into the appropriate categories. Look at the headlines below, and decide which column would be most appropriate for each. After you have organized these headlines, your teacher will give you several articles from the newspaper. Read the articles and write the headlines in the appropriate columns.

Read through the following statements, and number them so that they form a logical story. Using a separate sheet of paper, copy the sentences out, adding transition words if necessary, to recreate the article that accompanies the headline “Students Caught in Mystifying Case”.

_____ 1. The first reports indicate that on March 17, 2004, two unidentified students were caught holding and reading various textbooks and novels.

_____ 2. Although the case remains unsolved, the community is keeping close watch on the students to determine the cause of this learning experience.

_____ 3. According to numerous eyewitness reports, a major and shocking occurrence has happened in the community of Readalot, Pencilvania.

_____ 4. An official investigation was launched yesterday to determine the truth about this matter.

_____ 5. Since the investigation was announced, several witnesses have come forward to give testimony.

_____ 6. Statistics show that only twenty-two percent of American adolescents read voluntarily.

_____ 7. One parent’s comment was, “It couldn’t have been my child! My son is an underachiever, and only watches TV or plays video games. Someone must have forced those poor kids. I’m sure it wasn’t their fault.”

_____ 8. The community is in disbelief that local children would independently do such a thing.

_____ 9. The adolescents, both students at a local middle school, were not in class at the time.

_____ 10. An investigation is underway to determine the cause of this strange and unexplained event.

_____ 11. Next week, a town meeting will be held to discuss the likelihood of future reoccurrences. Contact the local Reading Renegade Association for further information.

_____ 12. The names of the suspects have not been released, and they have not been interviewed. Their parents, however, have been contacted.

Model Behavior

The best way to develop an understanding of the way news articles are written is to read the news. The articles in the newspaper will expose you to the language and format, or structure, of a well-written news article. Published news articles are not perfect, however, and sometimes contain mistakes, misquotes, or opinions. Using an article from the newspaper, complete the following chart. (Some articles may not contain all the elements.) Can you find any mistakes?

The following article contains mistakes in spelling, punctuation, and capitalization. Using editing marks, correct the article.

Students Caught in Mystifying Case

By news Reporter

Readalot pencilvania – According to numerous eywitnes report a major and shocking occurrence has happened in the community of readalot pencilvania. The first reports indicates that on march 17, 2004, two unidentified students were caught holding and reading various textbooks and novels. An Oficial Investigantion was lunched Yesterday to determine the truth about this matter. Since the investigantion was announced several witneses have come forward to give testimony. One parents comment was It could’nt have been my child my son is an underachiever and only watches tv or plays video games someone must have forced those poor kids. I’m sure it wasn’t their fault.

Statistics show that only twentytwo percent of american adolesents read volunteerily.. The community is in disbelief that local children would independantly do such a thing! The names of the suspects have not been released, and they have not been interviewed their parents however have been contacted. The Adolescents, both students at a local Middle School, were not in class at the time. An investigantion is under-way to determine the cause of this strange and unexplained event.

Next week, a Town Meeting will be held to discuss the likelyhood of future reoccurrences. Contact the local Reading renegade association for further information. Although the case remains unsolved the community is keeping closewatch on the students to determine the cause of this learning experience.
Creative Writing
Writing for the Tabloids

Most newspapers can be classified into two major groups: ‘broadsheets’ and ‘tabloids’. Broadsheets are literally printed on larger sheets of paper, and generally contain more serious articles. Tabloids are often smaller in size, and contain articles that often include imaginative details or interpretations. Although the evidence for many tabloid articles is scanty or non-existent, they are written in a convincing tone similar to that used in standard news articles. Tabloids have to be very careful when writing about real people, because they can be accused of ‘libel’, or writing harmful lies.

Writing a Tabloid Article

• Your teacher will provide you with an assortment of photographs taken from magazines or newspapers. Select a photograph that appeals to you.

• Create a story based around the photograph. Remember that for the tabloids, no story is too strange.

• Using the checklist provided, draft your article. The key to a successful tabloid article is the use of standard journalistic techniques combined with unbelievable details. Remember: your job is to make the impossible sound believable.

News Article Checklist

• Headline
• Byline
• Location
• Lead
  o State the date or time the incident happened/will happen.
  o State who or what is affected by the incident.
  o Write a description of the place where this event takes place.
  o Explain in short detail what happened.
  o Include any known causes for the event.
  o Briefly explain how the event happened/will happen.
  o List the names of any other people or events directly affected the incident.
  o After the drafting the lead, check to make sure you have answered the 5W-1H questions.
• Supporting Paragraphs (Include any of the following information)
  o Quotes
  o Witness accounts
  o Supporting details
  o Description of the possible effects on the public
• Photos (Optional)
  o If you wish to accompany your article with a photograph, compose a caption that explains the relationship of the photograph to your article.

Students Caught in Mystifying Case
by News Reporter

Readalot, Pencilvania – According to numerous eyewitness reports, a major and shocking occurrence has happened in the community of Readalot, Pencilvania. The first reports indicate that on March 17, 2004, two unidentified students were caught holding and reading various textbooks and novels. An official investigation was launched yesterday to determine the truth about this matter. Since the investigation was announced, several witnesses have come forward to give testimony. One parent’s comment was, “It couldn’t have been my child! My son is an underachiever, and only watches TV or plays video games. Someone must have forced those poor kids. I’m sure it wasn’t their fault.”

Statistics show that only twenty-two percent of American adolescents read voluntarily. The community is in disbelief that local children would independently do such a thing. The names of the suspects have not been released, and they have not been interviewed. Their parents, however, have been contacted. The adolescents, both students at a local middle school, were not in class at the time. An investigation is underway to determine the cause of this strange and unexplained event.

Next week, a town meeting will be held to discuss the likelihood of future reoccurrences. Contact the local Reading Renegade Association for further information. Although the case remains unsolved, the community is keeping close watch on the students to determine the cause of this learning experience.
